TEXT C

There are a few things you should keep in mind when you talk to your professors especially if you ask for a particular favor.

Call them by the right title. A “Doctor” is someone with a Ph.D. not all professors have Ph.D. “Professor” is usually acceptable, unless you have been told otherwise. I prefer to be called by my first name, an I make that point clear on the first day of my class. If you are totally unsure, a “Mr.” or “Ms.” is usually fine. Do not use “Mrs.” unless the professor herself uses it; it is time to recognize that not all adult women are or want to be married.

Be prepared to do the work. If you have missed an assignment or a test or are falling behind in our reading, and you are seeking help to catch up or a special dispensation to make up the assignment, you had better be prepared to do the work — and generally under more difficult conditions. I get the impression that a lot of students imagine I might just say “don’t worry about it, I’ll give you the points any way!” This, of course, is not going to happen.

Prepare for disappointment. So often, a professor will not or cannot help you. Your professor probably spent another hour explaining it to you at the beginning of the class, so he or she has invested a lot in the rules. They especially hate it when you do not do an assignment and then ask honestly if you should continue in the class.

11. Which title is usually acceptable for a student to call a teacher at a university?

- A. Doctor B. Professor C. Mr. or Mrs. D. First name

12. As a university student who has missed a test, you had better _____

- A. Ask for a particular favor B. Ask for an easy makeup test
C. Get prepared to work harder D. Seek help from your professor

13. Professors hate it when students do not do an assignment and then ask for a way to make if up, for they have already _____

15.

16.
17.
18.
19.
